

The Hidden Hours Worksheet

You do not lack talent. You lack three hours a week, and they are already in your house.

1. The 168 hour week

Every week is 168 hours, no exceptions. The reference column shows a typical week. Fill in your own, then mark each block: locked time cannot move, partial time can flex, hidden time is where your book is waiting.

ACTIVITY	TYPICAL	YOUR WEEK	LOCKED, PARTIAL OR HIDDEN?
Sleep	56		LOCKED never touch this one
Work	40		LOCKED
Family and social life	17		PARTIAL
Meals and cooking	14		PARTIAL
Screens, TV, scrolling	14		HIDDEN
Housework	7		HIDDEN
Personal care	7		LOCKED
Commuting	5		HIDDEN
Exercise	3		LOCKED
Waiting and errands	3		HIDDEN

In the typical week, 29 hours are hidden and 31 more are partial. You do not need them all. Three hours a week is more than 150 hours a year. That is a finished, published product, every single year.

2. The method

1

Find the windows

A quiet half hour before the house wakes. One lunch a week. The commute. Two evenings after bedtime. One weekend session.

2

Attach the work

Short windows force focus. Guard them: no meetings, no interruptions, phone in another room. A small fixed window actually gets used.

3

Buy back time

Let machines and services take the chores. Robot vacuum, grocery delivery, one screen hour traded for one making hour.

Your three hours

Windows, one small step, and one commitment somebody knows about.

3. My windows

List every window you can find in your week. Then circle the three you commit to. Three is the number, more is a bonus.

WHERE (BLOCK)	WHICH DAY	HOW LONG	CIRCLED?

4. The smallest next step

Something you can finish inside one single window. Not the chapter. The table. Not the setting. The one page.

5. The one commitment

A commitment nobody knows about is a wish. Tell one person.

What I will finish:

By when (date):

Who knows about it:

Three hours next week. One step. The drawer opens from the inside.
