Silverheart: The Legacy of the Deep

Silverheart (Sølvhjerter) is the roleplaying game from the silver mining town of Kongsberg, made for the town's 400th anniversary with financial support from the municipality and expert assistance from the Norwegian Mining Museum. The game was gifted to the town's secondary schools and is used in history teaching today.

Students play poor townspeople burdened with debt in a town of miners, traders, watchmen and executioners. More than a book: this is a method for learning history by living it.

Kongsberg is Norway's second largest city

1805

The Silver Works shuts down, the crisis the game is set in 2024

Anniversary gift to the town's schools

2027

Licensed school portal and English edition

BUILT ON REAL HISTORY

Landmarks, trades and events from Kongsberg's own past, verified with the Mining Museum.

REFLECTION IS BUILT IN

Structured follow-up work connects the experience to curriculum goals.

NO PRIOR KNOWLEDGE

Simple OSR style rules. Works where neither teacher nor students have played before.

TESTED IN SCHOOLS

Developed with a museum educator and tried out in classrooms before regular use.

RRP $45. English version coming soon. The current edition is Norwegian text, final print run, institutional pricing and class sets on request. In 2027 the school portal arrives, where schools take out a license for complete lesson plans, a teacher's guide and a class set program, alongside the English edition. The waiting list at kr1publishing.com/silverheart hears first and gets pilot pricing.

The catalog grows

Four launches before Christmas

SEPTEMBER	Hexcrawl: Thornwall Frontier, fourth book in the series
OCTOBER	Sandbox Toolkit: The Wilderness, book two (book one reached Electrum)
NOVEMBER	Hexcrawl books 5 and 6, double launch before Black Friday
DECEMBER	Sandbox Toolkit: The Dungeon, completing the series

Four launches are already dated before Christmas, and they are the beginning, not the exception. KR1 builds its catalog together with established designers and partner publishers, and toward 2030 it will grow substantially: more series, more collaborations and more titles in print every single year.

For you as a retailer that means a shelf that renews itself. Your customers get series to collect, and you get a supplier who comes back with something new every season.

Among the partners: Matthijs Holter (the Hexcrawl series) · Michael Sollien and Nicolai Strøm (the Sandbox series, Seidmann Games) · Petter Fornes (Gründer)
